Welcome, friends.

We're thrilled to have you here as we celebrate a significant moment in KPC's history – our 25th anniversary as Kirkland's cultural and artistic hub.

Though the past few years brought unprecedented challenges to our doorstep, KPC persevered, and in many ways, became stronger. And now, after a four-year hiatus from in-person galas, it's heartwarming to see our supportive community back together.

This year is a game-changer for us. We're hosting twice as many touring shows than any previous year, showcasing our most diverse programming to date, and our community rental program is already fully booked.

This year brings another exciting chapter to our story with the grand opening of KPC Studios, a state-of-the-art educational facility that offers a diverse range of classes and recording opportunities for our community. We're genuinely excited about the possibilities this space holds to bridge the gaps in public education and ignite the creative potential of students, regardless of age.

The future looks bright, and we owe it all to you. Your unwavering support for our community and performing arts on the Eastside is truly inspiring.

We can't thank you enough for being here tonight.

Rock on,

Jeff Lockhart
